GERMANY AND AUSTRIA. The Emperor of Germany, accompanied Phince Bismarck, has been on a visit to the Emperor of Anstria. It is not concealed that the visit has for its object the attainment of political ends. That is to say, the conclusion of such an alliance as shall prevent France disturbing the peace of Europe, and as shall secure the independence of Italy against Ultramontane aggression. The meetings, reception, and adieu of these Potentates have been ostersibly cordial in the extreme. The respective Chancellors of the two Empires are coming in for their full share of Imperial courtesy and popular enthusiasm. It is estonishing how Bismurck could foresee this Ultramontane squall. The Papists, no doubt, managed to conceal their forces wonderfully, and if they could have controlled Hibernian fanaticism, they would have made a better fight. But here, in the United Kingdom, where there is tolerance and liberty enough and to spare, where the Queen travels under the protection of Mr. Brown, an ex-gilly, and the Prince of Wales goes about in Hansom cabe, to show the reliance, and claim the su--preumey, they have done and still do-furnishes the German Chancellor with a case whereat he accompanied by chests of selected samples known as " musters," and it was suggested that 'the examination should be made in future not from those " musters," but from chests taken indiscriminately from the soveral "chops." It was alleged that the "musters" contained a better quality of tea than the bulk they professed to represent. The important question then crose, what should be done with ten which the experienced inspectors certified to be adulterated and unfit for human food. The Commission had on that point taken the highest ground on ormer occasions, and stated their conviction that the only course which, as the Board of Health for the City, they could adopt, was to have such spurious matter at once destroyed and so provent its sale and distribution through the metropolis and the kingdom. Some of the petitioners had demurred to the course of proceeding, as being liable to cause an injustice to the merchant or consignee, who they thought, should be allowed to take away, re-export, or return the condemned tea to the Chinese or foreign merchants by whom it was sent to them. They, however, generally agreed that as al such teas had been for years received in bond, and passed out by Her Majesty's Customs on payment of the duty without objection, the foreign merchants ought to have due natice of all intended future proceedings in reference thereto, and they therefore suggested that a manner as should be conveyed distinctly and directly to the Chinese ports and elsewhere. which they believed would have the effect of preventing the exportation from such ports of all spurious and adulterated tea. That notice would be to the effect that after a certain fixed date all tens cutoring English ports would be subject to strict examination, and if found spurious and adulterated would be immediately scized and destroyed. The committee had carefully considered the question, and were of opinion that there could be no effectual means adopted to put a stop to such dishonest proture, and they therefore recommended that the Court, as the local authority for the City under the Adulteration Act, should take such steps as they might be advised to induce the Government to introduce a Bill-into Parliament early next session, containing such provisions as would empower all local authorities throughout the kingdom to examine on board ship and elsowhere, in their respective districts, and if necessary-to-seize, such tess as in the judgment of their duly authorised officers were adulterated and unfit for human food, and to destroy auch as should be legally condemned. POR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All toe new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous ob jects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast oconomy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the D. HOW STRANGE IT WILL BE. 🚜 How strange it will be, love-how strange when we Shall be what all lovers become ! You rigid and faithless, I cold and untrue; You thoughtless of me, and I careless of you; Our pet names grown rusty with nothing to do; Love's bright web maravelled; and cont and worn through, And life's boom left empty-al, lum!

Ah, me i How strange it will be How strange if will be when the witchery goes, Which makes me seem layely to-day.; ..... When your thought of me loses its couleur de rose; When every day serves nome new fault to disclose, And wonder you could for a moment suppose-When you find I've cold eyes, and an every-day nose I was out of the common place why; Ah, me !

How strange it will be 1. How strange it will be, love-how strange when we mee With just a chill touch of the hand; When my palses no longer delightfally beat At the thought of your coming, the sound of your feet; When I watch not your coming far down the long street When your dear loving voice, too, so thrillingly sweet, Grows harsh in reproach or command:

How strange it will be! How strange it will be when we willingly stay Divided the weary day through i Or getting remotely apart, as we may, Sit chilly and silent, with nothing to say; Or coolly converse on the news of the day. In a wearisome, old married falk sort of way ! I shrink from the picture-don't you?

How strange it will be! Dear love, if our hearts do grow terpid and cold, As so many others have done; If we let our love perish with hunger and cold If we dim all life's diamonds and tarnish its gold; If we choose to live wretched and die uniconsoled, Twill be strangest of all things that ever were tall As hoppening under the sun!

THE SARDINE FISHERY. HOW SARDINES ARE PREPARED FOR THE

MARKET. (From the New York Mail.) The sardine fishery, with all its attendant industrial activities, is one of the important business features of the coast of France. There are indications, however, that these toothsome little fish are either becoming searce or less easy caught than of aforetime : for the yield grows, less every year, both in the aggregate quantity obtained and the average catch per boat. The fishery is prosecuted from April to October, and furnishes employment to some 20,000 sailors, with their 3,840 boats on the water, and some 18,000 men, women and children on land, in preparing the fish for market. Every year shows a diminution in the catch, and an advance in the price. This is shown by a table, recently published by the American Grocer; which gives the figures of the sardine fishery for the past thirty years, and exhibits the annual decline in quantity caught and the corresponding advance in market price. Whereas, from 1840 to 1849 the average catch per boat was 335,600 fish, and their price about 31 per 1,000; the catch last year averaged only 65,000 fish per boat, and the price has 20 per cent. amounted up to some $8.50 ner 1,000 fish. It is, therefore, quite probable that; unless some change soon comes, sardines will take their place among epicurean ravities, and will command that peculiar respect which while so numerously and cheaply procured, they have failed to compel.

The preparation of sardines for market is quite an interesting performance, and is mostly done by women and children who leave country homes to spend the "sardine "season" but the coast. These do all the handling of the fish from the time they leave -the boats until they are ready to be finally soldered up in their boxes. They work ten hours a day as a rule, and may do as much over-work as they choose, at from three to four cents an hour. They usually make sixteen hours a day's work, and as they are free to eat as many sardines as they want (although expected to "find themselves" in all other respects), they generally manage to keep their families through the winter. They sleep in an out-house of the shanty description, and supply their own beds, and do all their own housekeeping.

The condition precedent -" first catel your fish "-having been complied with the sardines are taken to the workshop, where they are at once salted, which is done by throwing into each basket a few handfuls of rock salt. and shaking the baskets so that the salt shall reach every fish. Then they are spread out upon tables covered with zine, and left three BATAVIA SEA AND FIRE INSURANCE or four hours, to allow all .liquid to drain off. Next they are decapitated and WHE Undersigned are now propared to grant, deprived of their insides by means of sharp | Lonbehalf of the above Company, Policies knives, which are made to operate with won- against Fire on First-class Buildings, to an exderful dexterity in the hands of these female tent of $10,000 and infantile experts. Frying comes next in order, and this is-done, not in their own fat, of which the fish have no superabundance, but in the best kind of olive oil, in paus, each just large enough to hold one of the wire baskets. Here they simmer in the bolling oil from five to ten mintues, until by testing they are found to be cooked. This testing consists in. taking out a fish and breaking it in two. when, if it is white and the back-bone quickly detaches itself, the fish is considered cooked. and the basket is taken from the pan.

viously described. They are now taken out of the baskets one by one and laid in the boxes literally sardine fashion, and are overflowed with pure, fresh clive oil. As the fish absorb a portion of the oil, there is no stinting of the delage they receive. The boxes then pass to the hands of the solderer, who operates with an iron kept hot by a gas-burner "in its midst," connected by a rubber tube with the gass pipes, and having before him a table so arranged as to revolve and save time in manipulating the boxes. The process of soldering is swift and systematic, a single revolution of the iron completing the job. A final touch is the depositing of the boxes, 800 or 1,000 at once in a vat, where they are made to boil for ten or fifteen minutes. After this they are put away for a day or two in a room, in order to see if any fermentation is likely to take place, and then they are taken into a room, kneedeep with sawdust, where a swarm of girls are ready to rub them with sawdast until all the oil is wiped off, and the boxes are as bright as can be. Thence they go to the packing-room, and thereafter to the place appointed for all good sardines.

Short time was needed for him to stow away his black consoler, and buckle to the rescue. "Tapping," most ungently, "at the chamiler door," which was quickly opened, he was welcomed by the youngsters, who bad gathered for a reel at the invitation of Aggie Stewart, with such evident delight that he quite forgot the object of his mission. They placed him in the cosiest chair, handed bim Francis's pipe, gave him a mug of homebrewed, and made him feel comfortable: and then one of the young rascals, who knew his weakness, taunted him with inability to compete with the lads present in thriding the mazes of a country dance.
